

Rosalia Guerrero, MBA

Director

Vulnerable Populations

UTHealth School of Public Health

Connecting Latino Populations to Clinical Trials through Partnerships with Community Health Workers

Rosalia Guerrero currently serves as the Director of Vulnerable Populations for the Texas Epidemic Public Health Institute (TEPHI) and manages the Community Health Worker Training Program at the UTHealth, School of Public Health (UTSPH) in Houston. She has over 15 years of experience working with frontline public health workers and low-resourced communities. Rosalia's interests focus on community engagement and community-based participatory research around various health, environment, and social justice issues. She has worked with urban, rural, and border communities including colonia communities along the Texas-Mexico border. Rosalia has a B.S. in Psychology and Pre-Medicine from Texas A&M, College Station, an MBA from the University of Houston Downtown, and is pursuing her DrPH from UTSPH.